BETWEEN THE LINES

ALL THIS, AND BREAKFAST TOO!

If you chance to drop by your neighborhood supermarket any time soon, be sure to stroll down the aisle where they sell the Packaged Dry Cereal. There, beside the boxes of Fudgie-Wuddies and Chocolate Frosted Sugar Bombs, you're sure to find that American classic, good old Kellogg's Corn Flakes.

Do yourself a favor. Pick up a box and check out the special limited time offer advertised on the back.

And why are we talking about a breakfast cereal in the pages of a Disney Comic, you ask? Well, unless you've picked up a particularly old box of Kellogg's Corn Flakes, you should find an offer thereupon for a free (well, okay, it's free for two box tops) copy of a new digest-sized magazine that calls itself DISNEY ADVENTURES.

Starting to see the subtle connection here? Beginning this October -- and for every month thereafter -- you'll be able to find DISNEY ADVENTURES waiting for you at the checkout stand of that same supermarket.

Crammed full of fascinating articles, celebrity interviews, fabulous photo features, mind-bending puzzles and games, and all-new comics adventures of DuckTales, Chip 'N' Dale Rescue Rangers, Tale Spin, and all your other favorite Disney characters, DISNEY ADVENTURES is a magazine unlike any you've seen before.

As we mentioned, the first newsstand copy of DISNEY ADVENTURES will be available everywhere in October, but this special sneak preview issue will only be available through this special limited time offer from Disney and Kellogg's. We promise it's something you won't want to miss.

DISNEY ADVENTURES -- it's something to read while you eat your breakfast -- and a whole lot more!

GAWRSH!

I GOT MUH OWN LETTER COLUMN!

Send to: Disney Comics, 500 South Buena Vista Street
Burbank, California 91521

Dear Goofs,

I was surprised that the main story in Goofy Adventures #3 was a reprint. This is how a Goofy Adventure should be made. How about a new story with a lot of Disney characters in it? Goofy's help in this story was . . . well, Goofy as usual, and of course, Donald was even less help.

Alexander the Goof triumphed in this issue, so I assume some day you'll show us his eventual Goofy fall.

You said in #3's letter column that you won't do Goofy Hitler because he could be considered offensive. Since Goofy Hitler would be an utter idiot and make a total fool of himself, how would he be offensive? Charlie Chaplin and the Three Stooges poked fun at him while he was in power.

Ronald Morgan
Norwalk, CA

Goofy Hitler might not offend some readers, but others might feel that we're not taking Hitler and his terrible acts seriously. Also, to have a good, sweet guy such as Goofy portray Hitler would be to pay Hitler a compliment that he doesn't deserve.

By the way, if you want to see another story chock full of Disney characters, check out next issue.

* * *

Dear David,

This may be a stupid question, but on the cover of #3, who's pulling the wagon? That's the back of the wagon, you say? Oh, yeah? Well, then, what's Goofy doing leading the back of . . . oh. He's Goofy. (I loved the horse's expression, though.)

You've set up quite a job for yourselves. Can you sustain such an unusual -- and ambitious -- concept? You say you'd like to stick to the more famous figures in history. I think your biggest problem is that a lot of kids today are history-ignorant. I wonder how many high schoolers, even, know anything about Balboa, Charles Lindbergh, Alexander the Great, Napoleon Bonaparte, Harry Houdini, Franklin

Roosevelt, Matthew Peary, William the Conqueror, etc., etc. Your younger readers may not have even heard of a lot of them.

Here's something you could do, and provide a little public service at the same time: at the end of each story, tack on a page or two of "straight" art telling the real story of the person parodied. Then in the lettercol, suggest a couple of books about the person.

It might do some good. I think the biggest problem for the kids is the history textbooks. History is fascinating. History is exciting. History books are BO-RING! They're written like they're about dead people! They are dead now, of course, but the point is, they weren't dead when they were making history. History should be written like it happened yesterday.

Mull the idea over. Good luck, whether you use it or not. You've got plenty of potential stories.

John Henry Sain
Medford, OR

Thanks for the suggestions, John. Right now, we have a limited number of pages, so we plan to keep them all comics, stories and entertainment rather than straight history. But if our readers clamor for straight history -- well, we'll see what we can do.

* * *

Dear Mr. Seidman:

I am 14 years old, and I extremely enjoy the Goofy Adventures comic book. I've never read a more enjoyable comic book. Not only is it entertaining, but it's educational, like DuckTales. Keep up the good work.

One concern of mine, though, is: why can't Goofy portray Mr. Walt Disney? I am the Number One fan of all of Disney (I've got the memorabilia to prove it) and was wondering why a comic couldn't be featured as a tribute to the founder of all this magic? I know you said it's against company policy, but what does the policy say?

Artie O'Daly
Diamond Bar, CA

No one's ever decreed, "Don't do

Goofy as Walt Disney." The problem is that Goofy may be a sweet guy, but he's -- well -- not terribly bright, and it would insult our founder to have someone like that portray him.

* * *

The Request Poll

You long-time Goofy Adventures vets know the Request Poll: It's where you name one, two, three or four people for Goofy to be.

There's not much change from last issue. Babe Ruth is the only new star to join such stalwarts as George Washington, Davy Crockett, James Bond and Count Dracula as leaders in the voting. (I'm crushed, though; no one's nominated Goofy Seidman. Ah, well . . .)

We printed this issue's Super Goof story in response to the Request Poll. So write in your requests. We may build an issue around them!

* * *

Next Issue

Goofy, Mickey and Donald team up as "The Three Musketeers Plus One" by Vic Lockman. We also have some surprises planned under a cover by Keith Tucker (Chip 'n Dale Rescue Rangers) and Larry Mayer (last issue's "Alexander Goofy Bell"). Join us, please.
